

I Saw Red Roses

You need to breath, your chest is heavy.
The weight is real, now you've lost control.
You turned your faith into all things mystic.
But destroyed your dreams of a stronger soul.

I saw red roses floating on the river.
I watched your face as they drifted out to sea.
I found a place where you can finally wander.
Can you see beyond here from the witness tree?

One desperado, two pirates posing.
I heard your name wayward on the wind.
You can now rest on the sacred mountain.
No fear, no pain, this is the end.

I saw red roses floating on the river.
I watched your face as they drifted out to sea.
I found a place where you can finally wander.
Can you see beyond here from the witness tree?

12 April 2020

Roger N. Renfro